Section A

Nominated topic: Nazi racial policies

- 1 Study all the following documents and answer the questions which follow. In evaluating and commenting upon the documents, it is essential to set them alongside, and to make use of, your own contextual knowledge.
 - A leading Nazi theorist and Minister for the Occupied Eastern Territories gives his view of war and race in a radio broadcast to mark the opening of an institute in Frankfurt for the exploration of the Jewish Question.

The war will bring immense reform. It will overcome the ideas of the French Revolution and exterminate directly all those racially infected germs of Jewry. The Jewish question was an unsolved problem for Europe for 2000 years, but, thanks to the Führer, it has found its solution. It will be finally solved when the last Jew has left the Greater German space. It does not matter whether such a programme takes five, ten or twenty years. The German armed forces will take care of any enemies who march against us for the benefit of Jewish financial domination.

Alfred Rosenberg, Speech, 28 March 1941.

B The Nazi Governor of occupied Poland, Hans Frank, addresses his cabinet in the Polish city of Kraków on the issue of the Jews.

I want to tell you frankly that the Jews must be done away with in one way or another. The Führer once said: 'should united Jewry again succeed in provoking a world war, then blood will be shed, the blood both of the nations forced into war by the Jews and of the Jews themselves.'

An old National Socialist once said that the war would only be a partial success if Jewry survived it. In January, a great discussion is going to take place about the Jews with General Heydrich. A great Jewish migration will take place, in any case. But what is to be done with the Jews? Do you think they will be settled in 'Ostland' [German occupied Eastern Europe] in villages? This is what I was told in Berlin: 'Why bother? What can we do with them in the East? Liquidate them yourself!' We must find a way that leads to that solution. Where and how is a matter for the offices that we must create here.

C Reinhard Heydrich, the Head of the Reich Security Service (SD), outlines the policy towards the Jews at the Wannsee Conference in Berlin.

The chief of the SD gave a brief review of the struggle up to now against the enemy. The most important aspects had been

- a. forcing the Jews out of each sphere of the life of the German people
- b. forcing the Jews out of the living space of the German people.

Acceleration of the emigration of the Jews from the Reich was undertaken in intensive and systematic fashion as the only feasible solution. A total of 537,000 Jews were induced to emigrate. In view of the dangers of a migration during wartime and in view of the possibilities in the East, the Reichsführer SS (Himmler) has prohibited the emigration of the Jews. Emigration has now been replaced by evacuation, in accordance with the personal authorisation of the Führer. In the course of the Final Solution, Europe is to be combed through from west to east. Evacuated Jews to be brought, group by group, into transit ghettos to be transported from there further east.

D A report by an SS medical officer of a visit to Polish death camps in August 1942.

SS Gruppenführer Globocnik was waiting for us in Lublin. He told us: 'This is top secret. Anyone blabbing will be shot.' He said there were three installations – Belzec, Sobibor, and Treblinka. Police Chief Wirth was head of all three of these death factories. Globocnik went on to say: 'The Führer and Himmler – they were here on 15 August 1942, the day before yesterday – instructed me to accompany personally all those who have to see these installations.'

Professor Pfannenstiel asked 'What did the Führer say?' Globocnik replied: 'The Führer ordered all action speeded up!' He said that Dr Lindner, the medical officer at the Interior Ministry, had asked: 'Wouldn't it be wiser to cremate the corpses instead of burying them? Another generation may see things differently.' Globocnik said he had replied: 'Gentlemen, if there were ever after us a generation so cowardly and so soft that they could not understand our work which is so necessary, then National Socialism would have been in vain.' The Führer then said 'Yes, my good Globocnik, you are right.'

Kurt Gerstein, Report, 1945.

E The testimony of Rudolf Höss, the commandant of Auschwitz, during his trial after the war. The following is an exchange between the prosecuting lawyer and Höss.

Dr Kaufman: You are the only one who can throw some light on certain hidden aspects and who can tell which people gave the orders for the destruction of the Jews.

Höss: In the summer of 1941 I was ordered to Berlin by Reichsführer SS Himmler to receive personal orders. He told me something to the effect that Hitler had given the order for a final solution of the Jewish question. We, the SS, must carry out that order. If it is not carried out, the Jews will later on destroy the German people. Himmler had chosen Auschwitz on account of its easy access by rail.

Kaufmann: Did you ever feel pity for the victims?

Höss: Yes.

Kaufmann: How was it possible for you to carry out these actions?

Höss: The only one and decisive argument was the strict order and the reason given by the Reichsführer Himmler.
